

DC Arts Center with Theater Du Jour and John Carter present
I, Jack, am the Knave of Hearts
A Play for Actor and Audience

March 14 through April 6 Thursdays, Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays at 7:30 pm

Matinee on Sunday, March 24 at 3:00 pm

$25/20 for DCAC members on Fridays and Saturdays

$20/15 for DCAC members on Thursdays and Sundays Call DC Arts Center to reserve your ticket

202-462-7833 or email info@dcartscenter.org

An empty stage and an eager audience. A man bursts onto the stage brandishing a sword; the sight of the audience fills him with longing and awakens distant shreds of memory. He has no idea where or who he is, but knows he is a great sinner who has escaped Hell. He casts a spell, and the audience's experience begins to fuse with his.

"I begin to know myself, a man back the other side of Hell, a man you hide your daughters from, a man with bloody hands. Am I that man?"

I, Jack, am the Knave of Hearts takes the audience on a journey of discovery and reckoning as Don Juan bursts through the fissure that separates mortality from eternal damnation and tries desperately to remember who he was, discover what he is doing here now and uncover why he has been allowed to escape.

“You want to know what Hell is like? Hell is to be aware when there is nothing to be aware of and nothing to be aware with but your own desire... Hell is the end of hope.”