After two months away doing various cool things, Buddha's back, and he's got Trike with him! The Happy Buddha show returns to it's Adams Morgan home at DCAC, and we've got an all-star line up for you featuring New York City's premier improv duo, Trike. The New York Times has called them "consistently complex, imaginative, improv" that is "reliably one of the best improv performances in the city." Come see them as well as some of the best local improvisers and standup comedians, in what is sure to be a most fun and hilarious Happy Buddha night!

About Trike: Peter McNerney and Nick Kanellis make up the two halves of New York City's premier improv duo Trike. Trike has been blowing minds with their unique brand of seamless, high-energy, multi-character improv shows since 2007. The New York Times calls Trike, "consistently complex, imaginative improv," that is "reliably one of the best improv performances in the city." Splitsider.com says that Trike's "fantastic late night show is upbeat and impressively layered improv that is always worth checking out," and in the "Splitsider Guide to NYC Comedy Scene", Trike was named one of eight "Best Weekly Shows." TimeOut New York declares Trike a "Critic's Pick" that "melds playful physical transformation and careful scene work in a weekly show that delivers an impressively quick and detailed overlap of events in its conclusion."
