

Happy Buddha IX: Improv from 'Sconin

July 10 at 10:00 PM

$10 General/ $8 DCAC Members

Glassworks (glassworksimprov.com) are a trio that has been performing together since grade school... This is before it was called "improv", back when it was just called, "messing around" or "inventing games" or "using the limitless power of the imagination to create whole worlds and people and stories." It was just what they did. In a lot of ways it is what they still do. They took workshops with some of the Second City bigwigs, shared the stage with touring rock bands, and even built a theater in their basement that now features not only other improv groups, but touring bands as well. Like those bands, they've now gone out on tour; they'll make stops in Minneapolis, Detroit, Boston, New York, Philly, Richmond, and, of course, DC, where they'll be staging a very special Thursday night show!

Along with these three likely lads, local legends The Score will take the stage to make instantaneous comedy magic from the songs on your mp3 player, the Buddha will lead the people in Dances for Candy, plus more comedic delights from Hot Meat Sandwich
